PROPOSALS. WAR DEPARTMENT SALE OF BUILDINGS and Fixtures:

The Quartermaster General of the Army offers for sale at Camp A. A. Humphreys.

Kamchatka Vividly Pictured by Geographic Society Bulletin.

Kamchatka and the neighboring counnews dispatches from Europe to have been leased by the bolshevik regime to velopment of its natural resources, is described in a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society:

"The Kamchatkan peninsula and the Siberian country between it and the Arctic ocean is a sort of half-sister to Alaska, which was also once Russian territory. Alaska, the more comely sister, fared forth, so to speak, was sold into the family of the wealthy Uncle Sam and has had a fife rich in excitement and adventure. Kamchatka, the more homely sister, remained under the Russian rooftree on the west side of Bering sea and has lived in seclusion.

"Kamchatka and the country north to Bering strait contains a large area of tundra or arctic plains; soft, spongy morasses during the few months of summer; frozen, snow-covered wastes in winter. In the higher land impenetrable underbrush springs up in summer. What little travel is possible at this season is done on the backs of sturdy ponies, who must wade up the shallow streams or plod through the sticky swamps.

Travel Easy in Winter. National Geographic Society:

Travel Easy in Winter.

"In winter travel is easy. Teams of dogs and reindeer whisk laden sledges over the frozen surface of the streams and across the snow of the tundra at a rate, under favorable circumstances, of seventy-five miles or more a day. Trails that are virtually highways are beaten down by the teams of the natives bringing their furs—the chief present resource of the country—to the trading posts.

"In the summer the curse of the moist regions of the north strikes the Kamchatkan country; swarms of mosquitoes and flies thicken the air and make life miserable for all living things. The nomadic natives flee with their herds of reindeer to the sea coast, where the breezes give some relief. Travel Easy in Winter.

"Though the climate of Kamchat-"Though the climate of Kamchatka is rigorous a westerner is likely to consider the food of the country more so. To the north reindeer meat in some form is the universal piece de resistance, the tongues and marrow bones being prised in particular.
From the stomach of slaughtered reindeer the natives obtain their 'greens' in winter—half digested balls of moss. When prepared for the table these moss balls are somewhat like spinach in appearance.

Cold Storage Eggs Popular.

spinach in appearance.

"Cold storage eggs contribute to the Kamchatkan tables. The eggs are obtained from the nests of gulls and other wild fowls and are buried in pits on the frosty north side of a hill until needed. Frozen berries also eke out the winter fare.

"Soup balls, carried by winter travelers are likely to prove a compensation to western palates. They are small balls of reindeer 'sausage' surrounded by a crust of dough, the whole about the size of an English walnut. These balls freeze and are carried in bags like marbles. A handful dropped into a kettle of boiling water produces within a few minutes a delectable and sustaining dish. "The Kamchatkan peninsula proper is about 750 miles in length, and the distance from its roots to Bering strait is an equal distance. Kamchatka lies in the same latitude as the British Isles, while the country north to the Arctic ocean is in the latitude of Norway. The Kamchatkan region is bathed by cold arctic currents, instead of the warm gulf stream, and its climate is therefore much celder than that of Britain and Scandinavis."

MERELY COLORED GLASS. One of British Crown Jewels Said

to Be Imitation. LONDON, November 22.—Sir George

LONDON, November 22.—Sir George Younghusband, keeper of the jewel house at the Tower of London, has just revealed the fact that one of the British crown jewels, of which he is custodian, is an imitation. The stone was believed to be a magnificent aquamarine, but proved, on examination, to be only a piece of colored glass. It figured first in the crown of King James II. The mystery of when the imitation was substituted for the real
